THIS IS EXTREME SCIENCE THAT USES RYAN'S EXPERIENCES TO EXPLAIN THE WORLD AROUND US AND ITS EFFECT ON THE HUMAN BODY.

GUINEA PIG

Ryan Stock and his fiancé AmberLynn do things in their everyday lives most people would never consider doing on a dare. They are extreme performers who have toured with the world famous Jim Rose Circus and their own Edmonton-based troupe, Mayhem. Sword swallowing, nasal drilling, fire eating and inexplicable body contortions are only a few of the skills in their repertoire.

Why would anyone do the crazy things they do? Ryan says it's because he's always wanted to learn about the world by experiencing it in the most extreme way possible. And in this series he's found a new way to do this – by making himself a human Guinea Pig.

Ryan doesn't read about less lethal weapons, he gets shot by a pepperball gun – normally only used by SWAT teams on rioters. He doesn't use facts and figures to explain impact – he gets hit by a 320-pound football player. He even goes face-to-face with scorpions, tarantulas and some of the world's deadliest snakes. This is extreme science that uses Ryan's experiences to explain the world around us and its effect on the human body.

Leading experts will provide the information Ryan and AmberLynn need to explain how his body reacts to the different experiences and high-end CGI will allow us to see what's happening to Ryan – inside and out.

Guinea Pig will bring the very real experiences of a professional daredevil to audiences as Ryan and AmberLynn push the limits of the human experience – all in the name of science!
